

FOR IMMEDIATE REVIEW

Gilbarco Veeder-Root launches
Intelligent Device Management at NACStech
Comprehensive system for fuel, power and fixture management

GREENSBORO, N.C. – May 11, 2009 – Gilbarco Veeder-Root will exhibit Intelligent Device Management (IDM) at NACStech, booth 609, May 18-20 at the Gaylord Texan Resort in Grapevine, TX. The software program summarizes status of heating, air conditioning, refrigeration and all Gilbarco® dispensers on a summary dashboard screen for easy management review and decision-making. It includes alarms, asset management, asset tracking and logical predictive maintenance in an easy-to-use system that can be viewed from virtually anywhere. Retailers can quickly control all devices in a single dashboard to manage their businesses by exception when conditions fall outside the typical or predefined ranges.

For example, a retailer who established in advance that a given cooler should operate within a specified overall temperature range will get an alarm notice if the cooler temperature goes out of that range or they are notified when a dispenser needs routine maintenance, such as filter changes, receipt paper, or other alarm conditions. Retailers can optimize power and energy consumption by establishing rules across a network of sites to avoid peak utility rates, maximize uptime, protect inventory, and comply with guidelines for food storage.

“With the energy savings, there is a very quick ROI on this program”, said Fawaz Khalil, Gilbarco’s director of service marketing. “Retailers report percentage power consumption savings in the range of double digits and additional savings measured in terms of increased uptime and saved inventory. Retailers who have tried the system report they save time and money and consumers have a better experience when everything is working as promised.”
